

Silverback Learning Solutions announces integration partnership with the (DLC) Digital Learning Collaborative

Meridian, Idaho (February 16, 2021) – Silverback Learning Solutions, an educational technology provider, is proud to announce an integration partnership with the Digital Learning Collaborative. The Digital Learning Collaborative (DLC) is a membership group dedicated to exploring, producing, and disseminating data, information, news, and best practices in digital learning. With this partnership, Silverback will integrate with DLC’s course platform offering teachers ongoing professional development to help cultivate strategies that enable long term growth in an ever-changing environment.

Allison Powell with DLC stated, “We have seen a huge need for preparing teachers for remote and hybrid learning environments and want to grow as many teachers as possible. By working with Silverback Learning Solutions, we’ve been able to expand the reach of teachers able to participate in the course, giving them the tools to better support their students during the pandemic and beyond.”

By combining Silverback’s capabilities with Digital Learning Collaborative, teachers will have access to extra resources and flexibility that are needed as the teaching expectations continue to shift and unfold throughout the school year. Teachers can also save time by syncing their Professional Development automatically, allowing for a more efficient classroom and district overall.

Andrew Klingman, Vice President of Sales and Channel at Silverback, had this to say about the partnership: “The Digital Learning Collaborative continues to provide high quality resources to support districts and schools across the country. As community stakeholders navigate the evolution of teaching and learning in a digital world, Silverback Learning Solutions is proud to partner with the DLC to promote their professional development series through our award-winning Vitae platform.”
